What are the 3 Ps of interviews?

Preparation

Preparation is the most crucial part of any interview. If you are well-groomed and confident but don't have the aptitude, then your chances of getting through the interview are slim. It's not just about technical know-how and knowledge about the job role but preferably a comprehensive approach.

Practice

After gathering all the information about the job role and company profile, and understanding your answers, it's time to practice. Being aware of the responses and communicating them out loud are two different things. Practice speaking in front of the mirror or record a video if you are preparing for a virtual interview, as it's equally critical to take care of the body language during video interviews. This will help you construct the answers effectively and improve your tone and pace.

Positivity

Positivity is reflected in your body language, tone of voice, and appearance, perfectly contributing to interview success.
